Android users will now benefit from a companion that puts the Google+ social network right in their pocket. Google+ for

Android (formerly G+) is an Android app that allows users to sign-in with their Google+ accounts and automatically sync their information across all their Android devices. The app also features a robust activity stream, chat, and stream management capabilities, and is integrated with the Google+ Android web browser. Facebook for Android is a companion app for Facebook that lets you easily share your content across other

Facebook-enabled devices. With Facebook for Android, you'll be able to log into your Facebook account from anywhere and share your posts with friends and family via the same apps and sites you use today. You can also add Facebook login to your websites using the standard Facebook login button, or send your credentials to websites so that you don't have to login to them every time. News May 13, 2012 Google releases a new version of its News app,

Google News, which is now available for Android, iOS, and the web. It promises to provide easier access to news content, including stories from around the world, as well as follow-up stories, multimedia content, and breaking news alerts. It’s available now for both Android and iOS. May 11, 2012 Google introduces Google Instant, a new feature that will appear in its search results pages. With Google Instant, as you type a query, Google will display the suggested results before you've finished typing. Google Instant will also show ads to match the phrases you're typing, based on your search history, for instance, if you're typing "document," Google might display a car ad, or if you're typing "gold," it might display a gold coin ad. May 8, 2012 Google releases a new version of its RSS reader, Google Reader, which has been available as a desktop app, but has now also been optimized for mobile. The new Google Reader for Android app was previously available in limited beta testing, but has now been made available for general consumption. May 7, 2012 Google introduces a new app for Android, called Hangouts. Hangouts is an instant messaging app for the Android platform that promises to deliver the following features: voice, video, and text chat; integration with Google+; and integration with

Google Voice. Hangouts is also an app that has been optimized for Android
