For example, I would like to show the Facebook login button if a user is logged in and hide it otherwise. This would involve removing the button and then putting a javascript include to include the correct button. I am new to coding and using php. I thought this might be doable by adding an if statement to the header file. Is this possible? A: Would be better to look into a plug-in that is already built for this situation. One example is WP login A: You can try this: if (user is logged in) { include (MOODLE_PATH. /myplugin/my_link_php); } else { include (MOODLE_PATH. /wp-content/themes/mytheme/login-form-template.php); } For more reading about themes, check out this page: Flow cytometric analysis of the cell cycle-associated nuclear antigens PCNA and cyclin A in ac 82138339de
