Example: If I am putting together a portfolio site with the design of something that I think is going to go viral within a few months, I might want to "control" the design. Example: If I'm putting together an MVP, which is very, very likely a side project that I'll never quit and grow, I can't say that I'm going to be addicted. At the very least, I don't want to say that I'll be addicted. Therefore, "I will be addicted" is clearly not a statement I want to make

Tags: virtualPhotographer, photoshop, photography, software Friday, January 29, 2014 When I started my computer class I started my life as a photographer with only 5 images on my hard drive. I knew it would take a lot of work and dedication to get my work to a very good standard, I knew I had all the skills required to be good but I just could not see it clearly, I would even find photography a bit boring so I decided to write a short article about what I had learned so far. Take a look at my skills and my achievements by the images I am sharing in this article: 1. Its dead simple, I am a fan of simplicity and I love experimenting with new things, I think it takes a lot of work to achieve good results and as you are learning you do not have time to spend hours and hours trying things you do not understand. The most important thing I did when I started this new journey was I used to look into people with a lot of experience and get some of their advice but what about me, I had no experience to draw on, I began my journey of learning. 2. Using my experience I used the time I spent learning to guide me, I realized I had a lot of things to learn but I knew what it meant to be good with Photoshop so I applied the knowledge I had gained so far and started to create some images. I started by just using the basic elements of Photoshop and I started to learn by example. 3. The best way to learn something is from real life so I started to travel and took a lot of photographs. I worked on a project, a client decided to use an image of mine. This image was a full creative process, it took a lot of my time to create and he wanted me to create an image he could use in his client-logo in the same way as he explained me. Then I realized I was being asked to apply what I had learned in my academic life to this real world image to get a better effect, the
