On Wednesday, Twitter announced a partnership with the United Nations International Communications Union (“ITU”) to allow its users to tweet alongside UN ambassadors. The new Twitter account, @UNWhistleblower, will tweet updates on important issues related to peace and security and will feature tweets from real UN ambassadors and experts in their respective fields. Chief among these will be James Anaya, the United Nations Special Representative on the situation of human rights in the Central American region (i.e., the Mexico-Guatemala border) and other countries. In April,

Anaya issued a report calling on Mexico to address the human rights situation in the country's southern border zone through implementation of the UN Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearances. Anaya also is a Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association. He's currently chairing the Inter-American Commission of Human Rights Advisory Board. His agency, the United Nations Human Rights Council, invited Anaya to make a 2011 report, which concluded that Mexico is failing to meet its human rights obligations, at this year's session. "Twitter is a powerful tool that help to inform the public about the issues and challenges facing the United Nations, whether it's in the Central American isthmus or elsewhere," Anaya said in a press release. "The company has a global footprint, so I'm excited to be working with its Twitter team to amplify information about the human rights situation in countries and regions where I travel." ITU Director-General Dr. Hamadoun Toure, who will serve as the organization's "ambassador" on Twitter, said the partnership will give the world a better view into the evolving world of diplomacy and highlight the need for greater access

The project focuses on the reduction of government and regulatory barriers to the entry of small and medium-sized (SME) telecommunications companies into Ecuador's service market. In this phase of TORC, the IDB and AELTE invested $2 million in cash to support the entry into the Ecuadorean market of five legal entities. The public-private project is funded by the $100 million Intercooperation Fund for Telecommunications Reforms promoted by the IDB and the FEMIP Foundation in 2011. Initiated in November 2012, TORC is implemented in four stages by the IDB, the Ministry of Planning and Economics (MOEE), and the Ministry of Transport and Telecommunications (MOTIVO). The largest TORC development to date,
