Logo Design Studio .Q: UIButton row color change programmatically Is there a way to change the color of UIButton programmatically? I created the UIButton programmatically and placed them in a UITableViewCell. I understand that I can use the various attributes/properties of UIColor and I can use the various methods like -[UIColor colorWithRed: green: blue: alpha:] to change the colors. I want to be able to change the background color of a particular row's UIButton. Does anyone have a suggestion as to how I can go about achieving this? A: Add that button to your UITableViewCell. For example, if your button is named myButton, then in your cellForRowAtIndexPath: method, you do something like this: - (UITableViewCell *)tableView:(UITableView *)tableView cellForRowAtIndexPath:(NSIndexPath *)indexPath { ... UITableViewCell cell = [tableView dequeueReusableCellWithIdentifier:@"Cell"]; if(cell == nil) { cell = [[[UITableViewCell alloc] initWithFrame:CGRectZero reuseIdentifier:@"Cell"] autorelease]; // put the button as a subview of the cell, it will be the same size [cell.contentView addSubview:myButton]; } myButton.tag = indexPath.row; // make your button respond to this myButton.frame = CGRectMake( etc */); // set button properties here ... return cell; } That way you can make the button respond to this and use tags to figure out which button you want to change. You can also put the button somewhere else in the cell, such as: - (UITableViewCell *)tableView:(UITableView *)tableView cellForRowAtIndexPath:(NS 595f342e71
